

Someone's watching

Journalism, advertising and privacy

Valentin
way2go! 7, Unit 9

Today's goals

- 01 Explain what makes a news report trustworthy.
- 02 Describe targeted advertising and its limits.
- 03 Use survey evidence in a short report.

Recall first: what do you already remember about this topic?

Starting-point quiz

Five points. Write the missing word, or Ø for no article.

- 1 ____ privacy is important to everyone. [a / the / Ø]
- 2 Advertisers are interested ____ our choices. [in / on / at]
- 3 Many people enjoy ____ videos. [watch / watching / to watch]
- 4 This source is more reliable ____ that one. [as / than / to]
- 5 This article provides useful _____. [information / informations]

A historical reading

p. 141, selected textbook passage

Reporters Without Borders also noted a substantial decline in press freedom in the Asia-Pacific region, where China is taking censorship and surveillance to new heights, and Vietnam, Cambodia and Singapore ranking increasingly close to China. These nations have been adopting China's model of fighting dissent through strict control of mass and social media.

Overall, the 2019 report concludes, journalists around the world faced more hostility towards their work in 2018 than they did in previous years.

In your own words: what changed, and which years does this passage describe?

One event, two headlines

Fictional news example

A Factory poisons our river

B Residents raise concerns about river waste

An illustration cannot prove what happened.

Which headline claims more? What evidence would a reporter need?

Listening: a local reporter

- 01 First listening: what makes Maya's reporting careful?
- 02 Second listening: collect details to support your answer.

Play Maya's story

Fictional story • NotebookLM AI narration • listen twice

Listening quiz

Notes are enough. Listen twice. Six points.

- 1 What problem does Maya's source report?
- 2 Which two sources does she check before publication?
- 3 What does the company manager say about the problem?
- 4 What uncertainty does Maya include in her report?
- 5 What does her editor help her do after publication?
- 6 What is Maya's main principle of journalism?

Accuracy clinic

Repair each sentence. Then explain one correction.

- 1 The journalists want publishing the story.
- 2 The society needs reliable information. [society in general]
- 3 The company is interested on our behaviour.
- 4 We look forward to hear the results.

One-minute opinion

Should a journalist publish a serious claim before checking it?

Give a view and one reason.

Consider a situation where speed matters.

Finish with a sensible condition for publishing.

Five-minute break

When we return: what can an advert infer about you?

5 minutes

What can this advert really know?

Fictional scenario • adapted from the p. 144 discussion

Describe what you can see. Then suggest two possible reasons for the search.

Use: “It might suggest...” and “Another explanation could be...”

Online advertising vocabulary

p. 144, exercise 27a

target audience

the people an advert aims to reach

personalise

adapt something to a particular person

track

follow or record activity over time

algorithm

a set of instructions for solving a task demand

people's desire to buy something appealing

attractive or interesting

Textbook checkpoint

p. 144, exercise 27a: selected decisions

Choose the word that fits each meaning.

- 1 An advert across a web page: banner / email spam
- 2 A particular group to reach: target audience / general audience
- 3 Adapt an advert to a person: personalise / block
- 4 Information about buyers: customer data / costumer data
- 5 A set of instructions: algorithms / surveys
- 6 Attractive to buyers: appealing / appalling

What do the survey results show?

p. 146, exercise 33: textbook survey, n = 40

Which option leads in 7a? Which options tie in 7b? How large is the biggest class gap?

A model paragraph

Findings	Print advertising attracted the most interest in 7a, at 40% . In 7b, print and TV were equally popular at 35% .
Possible reason	These results may reflect students' familiarity with these formats.
Limitation	However, the survey does not explain their reasons.
Recommendation	I recommend creating a print advert because it attracted strong interest in both classes.

Find the comparison, cautious explanation and recommendation.

Your report draft

- 01 Write 100–130 words for the English language assistant.
- 02 Use headings: Findings, Possible reasons, Recommendation.
- 03 Include two accurate comparisons and one cautious explanation.
- 04 Recommend one project activity with a reason.

Data reminder: 7a print 40%, TV 30%; 7b print 35%, TV 35%.

A focused edit

- 01 Are your numbers and comparisons correct?
- 02 Does each heading do its job?
- 03 Have you marked an explanation as possible, not proven?
- 04 Check one article, one preposition and one verb pattern.

Choose one sentence to improve. Keep its meaning.

Exit quiz

No notes. Six points. A short phrase is enough unless asked otherwise.

- 1 Complete: an ____ decision = a decision based on knowledge.
- 2 Repair: 'Advertisers are interested on our habits.'
- 3 Complete: 'She enjoys ____ news reports.' [read]
- 4 One class: 40%. Another: 35%. The gap is ____ percentage points.
- 5 Does a 40% leading share mean a majority? Explain.
- 6 Give one fair-reporting check from Maya's story.

Between lessons

- 01 Task 1 · 15 minutes: replay Maya, then retell the story without the transcript.
- 02 Task 2 · 15–20 minutes: revise your report and explain two changes.
- 03 Next time: recall three expressions and one fair-reporting check.

Agree the dates with Rory. No holiday work is assumed.

Extension: advertise a school event

p. 145, exercise 31: adapted one-to-one task

- 01 The school wants to advertise a charity sports event.
- 02 Compare a poster, a short online video and a targeted online advert.
- 03 Agree with Rory on the best option. Explain cost, reach and privacy.

Useful language: 'I see your point, but...' 'Compared with...' 'Could we agree on...?'
